

I've been seeking His face since last year and there has been a complete silence. However, on yesterday, something was different for me. There was a peace and calmness that came with the silence. It was not like times past that I was so busy when I couldn't hear. I was fully engaged and there was silence. For months I have been tossing and turning in my sleep and last night a rest came upon me. There is a sensing in my spirit that the Lord is going to manifest the things that He has spoken to us from years past.
